

COLLEGE of CHARLESTON

DEPARTMENT OF
RELIGIOUS STUDIES

JAMES MILLER

Associate Professor, Queens University

Towards an Ecologically Sustainable Future: The Role of Religion in 21st Century China

After decades of religious repression, China is experiencing an unprecedented religious revival that has the potential to challenge the dominant ideology of China's ruling elite. At the same time, China's staggering environmental crisis is prompting its leaders and intellectuals to search for alternatives to Western models of industrial development. This talk explores the potential of China's religious revival to make a positive contribution towards an ecologically sustainable future for China and the world.

Tuesday, April 21, 2009

3:30 pm

Robert Scott Small Building

Room 002

Open to the Public